Busselton Primary School students have channelled cubism co-founder Pablo Picasso with a milky twist.

The Picasso Cow is an initiative of Dairy Australia to promote the dairy industry to youth.

The school was selected to be part of the art and interactive learning competition along with 200 others across Australia.

Students learnt about the dairy industry through guest speakers invited to discuss their farms and in lessons throughout the term, studying the technology used during the farming process, and nutritional benefits of dairy products.

Busselton Primary School teacher Kylie Milne said the design reflected the unique life of Busselton.

“On the front of the cow you can see beach houses, and behind it shows the process of milk production,” she said.
